M audio fast track ultra 8r driver mac sierra

Page content loaded Sep 27, 2015 6:05 AM in response to Pancenter In response to Pancenter We don't really have the same problem though, my problem is that the buttons i'm supposed to press aren't there. I have OS X Yosemite, maybe the update has a different way of doing it, but i can't figure it out.You sent me to a site that said it's supposed to look like this first picture, but in my logic it looks like the second picture. Click and Hold over the top of the selection and see if the Ultra 8r is listed as a device.The pic you posted is exactly where you set the I/O devices for Logic.Are you saying the 8r isn't listed as an option. Sep 27, 2015 11:10 AM Reply Helpful Thread reply - more options Jan 13, 2016 3:50 AM in response to SillyPudding In response to SillyPudding Here's the Driver page..... is way behind the curve, typical for Avid.Lots of complaints.... you've already installed the latest drivers.... unplug the Ultra 8r and install the previous set of drivers (from October 2014_ reboot the computer, after it settles then plug in the Ultra 8r. if that doesn't work... follow the exact same procedure with the latest set of drivers. It's important to not have the Ultra 8r plugged in when installing drivers. I'm having the same issue. I've downloaded driver version 2.3.2 and continue having the same issue - even after unplugging and replugging the power to the Fat Track Ultra, restarting the computer, closing and reopening Logic X. What is it i'm missing?Thanks in advance! (also, what model computer)Unplug the 8R, reboot the computerInstall the latest 8r drivers (do not plug the 8r back in yet)reboot the computer and let it settle a minute or twoplug the 8r back in. Oct 7, 2015 12:57 PM Reply Helpful Thread reply - more options Oct 12, 2015 1:42 PM in response to Pancenter In response to Pancenter I have an iMac with OS X El Capitan. It's after I dowloaded and installed El Capitan that the M-Audio disappeared from Logic X. I did as you said and I still don't see it appearing in Logic. What else can I do? Oct 12, 2015 1:42 PM Reply Helpful Thread reply - more options Oct 12, 2015 2:17 PM in response to Rejual In response to Rejual What else can you do? Not much.Hope that M-Audio releases drivers for El Capitan or that the next release of El Capitan fixes some of the problems. You should definitely contact M-Audio about updated drivers for El Capitan.In the meantime, I hope you backed up your system so you can roll back to the previous operating system that worked. Why do people automatically upgrade without checking to see if your hardware is compatible? It makes no sense..... someone else posted that they were in the middle of a large project and upgraded to El Capitan and their hardware doesn't work and Logic is crashing. You CANNOT rely on Apple releasing fully compatible (or even complete) operating systems these days, they change a lot as Apple is trying to bring iOS and OSX under a single development platform. Apple's latest operating systems have been release in Beta test form, it's never wise to upgrade without checking. If you want to be on the cutting edge, prepare to bleed. Any thoughts on where to go now for a good audio interface? I don't want to give Avid any more money if they won't support apple long term. Not upgrading OS is not an option long term from a security standpoint.
